“ Terry and I grew up together like sisters and brothers. We enjoyed playing together as kids. It didn't matter if it was table pool, shooting marbles, climbing trees, touch football, baseball or just playing in the back yard, we all had lots of fun. Our parents were best friends. We both stayed, lived and ate at each other's house. It's hard to talk about Terry without talking about Perry, his twin brother, because they looked identical to me. As much as we played together, there were times when even I couldn't tell them apart. All of us, the Washington's family and the Rounds's family were very closely bonded as one big happy family. And even though we grew up together and played together we ended up traveled our own individual paths. But those memories and fun years will forever live next to my heart. Terry, thank you for the memories. They played a huge part of my childhood growing up. And thank you for being a true childhood friend and for your family being a second family to me. I will always remember those years & I will forever love you, until the day I die, my brother / my friend. RIP
