“ Today Jalon Victor’s son called me to tell me his dad passed away.
His dad told him about me.
I wept bitterly, Victor Green and I only met once.
In that one moment he changed my life when he changed my tire I was waiting for 2 1/2 hrs for the mechanic to come.
Literally 100’s of people passed me since I was in the labor department’s parking lot not one asked me if I was ok. He noticed me and asked if I needed help I explained and he said I will change your tire
Living in the USA without family is so hard I could not call my brothers
Vic became my brother, he saw me go from unemployed to a successful realtor
He asked me to help his sons get there
We talked about all so of strategy to make money
His dream was for his wife and him to get his sons their real estate license and help the boys have a better quality of life with a lot of wealth
I promised him I will help his sons
So today in honor of my friend I want to publicly declare I won’t stop pestering them until they licensed and I will show them the ropes
The only regret I have is I promised to cook him a curry and I moved away to Buford so I didn’t do it Victor know this you were a good man and I will keep my word to you !!
Your sister in Christ
